Tell us about yourself

A sense of community, empathy, and always looking for the best for everyone are some of my personality traits – the reason why I like to be involved in groups of community development. From Brazil, I have lived in Canada for three years. This move added a lot to my ability to develop projects and deal with problems. I am a very communicative person; I believe that clear communication is fundamental to everyone's success. I am extremely organized, and I work for fruitful results. I inherited great logical thinking from my previous training - mechanical engineering and an MBA.

What do you know about the Students' Association of Bow Valley College?

SABVC works as a bridge between students and Bow Valley College. With this, SABVC seeks to offer students the best possible experience on and off campus. In addition, SABVC offers a valuable connection between student life and the student's social/professional integration. With this, its objective is to promote the best possible development of the student, offering support, connections, and opportunities.

Diversity is a strength of SABVC. In your own words, how would you contribute to promoting diversity to the membership of SABVC?

I am of foreign origin; I came from Brazil three years ago. My cultural diversity allows me to observe different contrasts between both cultures - which allows me to develop projects and ideas seeking to unite the forces of each one. In addition, my previous training in mechanical engineering allows me to bring a technical perspective to the School of Community Studies. I have always played sports, and it taught me a lot about including people in society and how to encourage them to achieve their best.

What is your platform?

My work profile is focused on the success of the group and community. My benevolence and empathy skills make me always listen carefully to the needs of each one. With this, I work effectively to solve problems and develop projects that bring positive results to the community. I like to talk, and I am always very clear, I always try to understand other people's points of view so that I have a clear vision of the work to be done. My work is based on strategy, technology, and efficiency. I believe there is always something to improve.
